

No 'Missile Defense' in Korea No THAAD in Seongju

The U.S. has recently deployed a THAAD (Terminal High Altitude Area Defense) 'missile defense' (MD) system in Seongju, South Korea, despite massive on-going protests.

It is claimed that THAAD is there to intercept missiles from North Korea, but many experts believe China and Russia are the targets, given the enormous range of its radar which intensifies unnecessary military tension in the region.

The U.S. has also deployed other MD systems throughout the Asia-Pacific region, Europe and the Middle East to encircle Russia and China. MD is a key element in Pentagon first-strike attack planning. Stop the dangerous encirclement of Russia and China with MD!
